Amyloid diseases are rare disorders that can occur spontaneously, arising in the bone marrow, can be inherited, or can be "secondary" to other illnesses. In the past, these diseases were considered to be untreatable and often fatal. Through laboratory and clinical research, we have made great progress in diagnosing amyloidosis and in bringing innovative treatment to patients from all over the world. In recent years the prognosis has improved tremendously, giving hope to patients and families; we are entering a new era of targeted therapeutics for amyloid diseases that we hope will further improve outcomes. Our work relies greatly upon friends and family who have supported the dedicated researchers in the Gerry Amyloid Laboratory. Thank you so much for being part of this dedicated work.

Mr. Laszlo Bunda
Chairperson, Pop's Run

Dear Mr. Bunda:

I would like to thank you for conveying the gift of $5,350.00 on behalf of Nassau Wings Motor Cycle Club, Inc. to the Current Amyloid Research Fund. We are so pleased that you chose to donate the funds raised from Pop's Run to Boston University School of Medicine.

Because of the support of friends and alumni such as you, Dr. David Seldin and his team at the Amyloidosis Center can continue to work towards better treatment for this devastating disease.

Again, thank you for your commitment to this critical research at the School of Medicine.

Sincerely,

Thank you for your gift to Boston University.

Your generosity enables our University to reach ever-higher standards of excellence in education and research, while building a culture of philanthropy and pride among alumni, friends, and the entire Boston University community.

With your gift, you join our efforts to develop a world-class faculty; provide much-needed financial, academic, and student-life support to our scholars; advance our multifaceted research dedicated to solving the important and complex issues facing society today; and strengthen our local and global communities. Your gift makes a difference, and we are grateful. We hope our successes continue to merit your interest and investment in Boston University's future.

Thank you for supporting BU this year.

Most sincerely,

Scott G. Nichols
Senior Vice President, Development & Alumni Relations
